

A map of Darwin, Australia, showing the M65 highway. The highway is a thick yellow line that runs horizontally across the top of the image and then turns vertically downwards. A blue rectangular sign with the text 'M65' in white is positioned on the horizontal section of the highway. The city name 'Darwen' is written in black text in the center of the map. The map background is light gray with white lines representing roads and green patches representing parks or vegetation. There are also some blue patches representing water bodies.
