- A satellite map of a conflict zone, likely in Syria, showing a river and surrounding terrain. Numerous medical facilities are marked with colored pins containing a white cross. The pins are color-coded according to their operational status: orange for 'Attacked and evacuated', white for 'Evacuated', blue for 'Service suspended', and yellow for 'Open but under threat'. The facilities are concentrated in a central area, with some scattered further along the river. A legend in the top right corner explains the color coding.
