

A map of the Baishan region in China. A thick orange line represents a major road, with blue shields labeled '201' at three points. The road winds from the bottom left towards the top right. Several locations are marked with small circles and labels: Zhazi (top), Shiren (top right), Baishan (center), Hunjiang (center, below Baishan), Liudaojiang (bottom left), Qujiaying (bottom center), and Dajinggou (bottom right). A red dot is located on the road between the first and second '201' shields. The background is a light beige color with thin grey lines representing rivers or boundaries.
