

A topographic map of the Zinacantán region in Chiapas, Mexico. The map features a complex network of white contour lines indicating elevation. A prominent yellow line, likely a major road, runs diagonally from the top right towards the bottom right. The terrain is characterized by alternating light green and light brown patches, representing different land cover or vegetation types. The name "Zinacantán" is printed in black text in the center of the map, near a small cluster of buildings.
